

Abstract

The invention involves administration of an immunostimulatory nucleic acid in combination with a cancer medicament for the treatment or prevention of cancer in subjects. The combination of drugs are administered in synergistic amounts or in various dosages or at 5 various time schedules. The invention also relates to kits and compositions concerning the combination of drugs.